Highlighted Opportunities

Senior Officer, Reforming Industrial Animal Agriculture

Posted on: November 23, 2011

Posted by: The Pew Charitable Trusts

Location

901 E St. NW, 10th Floor, Washington, District of Columbia, 20004, United States

Organization: The Pew Charitable Trusts is driven by the power of knowledge to solve today's most challenging problems. Pew applies a rigorous, analytical approach to improve public policy, inform the public and stimulate civic life

Department: The Pew Environment Group – The mission of the Environment group is to promote policies and practices that protect the global environment, preserve healthy forests and marine ecosystems. For the past two decades, the Environment group has been a major force in driving conservation policy in the United States, and increasingly internationally. The group's work is focused on reducing the scope and severity of three major global environmental problems:

Transition to a clean energy economy from one based primarily on the burning of fossil fuels.

The erosion of large wilderness ecosystems that contain a great part of the world's remaining biodiversity; and,

The destruction of the world's marine environment, with a particular emphasis on global fisheries.

Campaign to Reform Industrial Animal Agriculture: Project Overview

United States government statistics indicate that about 500 million tons of animal manure are produced annually by confined animal feeding operations (CAFOs). Huge volumes of manure are commonly stored in open lagoons and sprayed on or applied to land in neighboring areas without treatment to control excess nutrients, pathogens and other contaminants. The sources of drinking water for an estimated 43 percent of the U.S. population have suffered some level of pathogen contamination associated with industrial animal agriculture. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, polluted runoff is now the single largest remaining water pollution problem, and agriculture is its principal source.

The first phase of the campaign, to be implemented over the next three years, would engage in recently proposed efforts by the EPA to strengthen waste treatment requirements in the states surrounding the Chesapeake Bay: Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Virginia. By focusing our initial efforts on the Chesapeake Bay, the campaign will be in an excellent position to influence a high-profile battle directly linked to pollution from industrial animal agriculture, and which will be the first focus of the administration's efforts to address the national water pollution problems associated with this industry. If successful in key states, the next phase of the campaign would use the strengthened state standards and public pressure to leverage stronger confinement and waste treatment requirements at the national level.

The campaign will also work to reform the most restrictive confinement methods of the largest industrial operations, such as gestation crates for sows.

Position Overview

The senior officer will work with the campaign staff to develop strategic and operational plans and functions for the project; represent PEG before policymakers, the media and nongovernmental organizations; and provide guidance to a campaign operation of up to 15 team members, including teams of field managers and organizers across 5-7 states; communications professionals, government affairs specialists, and a variety of consultants involved in public opinion research, advertising, and policy analysis. The senior officer will help facilitate the engagement of other constituency groups. With the campaign manager, the senior officer will manage the overall budget for the campaign, totaling $1.5 million this year..

This position is based in Washington, DC and reports to the Deputy Director for Government Relations at the Pew Environment Group. It is anticipated that the individual in this position will travel within the U.S. to help manage campaign activities and to PCT's Philadelphia office as needed. The position is currently approved for one year through June 2012, with plans to extend the position for up to an additional two years, pending approval by the Board.
